ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

[0052]   In a Reed-Solomon decoder, error magnitudes are determined from a root matrix and a syndrome vector. The root matrix is triangularized (60) using recursive calculations. The syndrome vector is adjusted to the triangulization (62) by recursive calculations. The error magnitudes are then determined through substitution (64).